Some measure of relief is presently needed. The particular character of that relief is not so important. The Tragedy in Alaska

To the Editor of The Evening Star: Two or three items appearing in your columns with reference to the government school teacher, Charles H. Edwards, in Alaska, have fallen under my notice, and I am constrained to make answer to the communication signed Emory M. Foster.

The difficulty in Alaska is that the govern-The difficulty in Alaska is that the government is, for the most part, in the hands of those who sympathize with evil doing. In seeking to excuse Commissioner Rogers for exonerating the slayer of Edwards by ruling that as the latter was not a "peace officer" he was guilty of an act of piracy, Mr. Foster sees fit to strengthen his case by referring to Edwards as a missionary, and says "the United States commissioner at Sitka has no power to create a government official cut of an Alaskan missionary"

missionary"

Beyond all question Mr Foster knew that Edwards was not in Alaska as a missionery, but as a duly commissioned government school teacher. Furthermore, he was the only white man at the settlement of Kake, and besides that was sent there by the government as its repre-sentative to care for and protect and educate

Under the circumstances he would have rendered himself liable to a charge of cowardice and would have betrayed the trust reposed in him by the government had he stood idly by and permitted those men to debauch the natives under his care with their whisky.

While the law is a rathor rigid thing, nevertheless it has been found many times necessary to take into consideration the environment in passing judgment upon any question. If the United States Supreme Court could justify the use of greenbacks as currency under the view that it was a war measure surely it would not have been very wrong for Mr. Com-would not have been very wrong for Mr. Commissioner Rogers to have held that Edwards was, constructively, a peace officer

The administration of justice (?) in Alaska is responsible for the death of Edwards. Case after case has arisen in which effort has been made by those who wished to see the laws upheld to punish evil doers and in which their efforts have been made to work to their own injury and to the exoneration of the violators of the law. It is no wonder that men who are willing to accumulate wealth by debauching and degrading the savage below his savage state are emboldened by this lax, and worse their tax, method of administering the laws to their open violation and to resisting to the death any interference with their nefarious conduct.

The young man who did the shooting may have "an excellent reputation in Juneau, his home," but, unfortnestely, snexcellent reputation at Juneau would not count for very much in any other section, and the fact that he himself admitted the killing of a man who was seeking to prevent him from committing a crime would indicate that any excellent reputation he may have had rested upon a very poor foundation.

I was not at Sitke at the time these men brought the body of the nurdered man to that place, but I was there for several weeks last summer and had a good apportunity for observing how affairs are conducted. I did not know the young man of "excellent reputation" from Juneau, but I did know Mr. Edwards.

It is said that at the end of the cabinet which agreed to propose a fixed duty on corn Lord Melbourne put his back to the door and said: "Now, is it to lower the price of corn, or isn't it? Postmaster Sherwood is desirous of having every Greatly Enjoying His Shooting Expedition recipient of an invitation call at the post office and see just how the boxes are expected to work. Of course no box can be adjusted to a door unless the householder is willing, but if the experience of the department in St. Louis amounts to anything it would seem as though there were really no objectors. These experimental boxes fit in the front doors and are so constructed that the householder need not go outside to mail letters and cannot keep the carrier waiting while he is engaged in the work of delivery. The box as viewed from the street resembles a handsome doorplate and it may be used as such. When a carrier has letters to deliver at a house which is provided with one of these boxes he will drop the mail into the slot and it will be visible fro the inside of the door. Should there be mail to collect the carrier will be made aware of the fact by the appearance on the front of the box of a bright red disk. THE BOSTON'S MISSION.

Crew of the Brig Tahiti.

There lies quite an interesting story back of the simple paragraph printed in yesterday's STAR to the effect that the U. S. S. Boston would possibly be called upon to go to an island off the west coast of Mexico to pick up the crew of an abandoned vessel supposed to be there. The Boston is now on her way from Callao to San Francisco, and on her arrival at Panama she will probably be met with a telegram ordering her to stop at the Island of Socorra to see if perchance there may not be there a band of shipwrecked sailors, who, if they are there, have probably given up all hope of ever being rescued.

Among Secretary Tracy's callers yesterday was a Mr. Leavitt, who is a part owner of the American brig Tahiti that was lost with all on board about September 20 last. He stated to the Secretary that there was a possibility that the crew of the brig may have escaped and found refuge on the Island of Socorra, one of a group of islands a couple of hundred miles off the coast. The way he came to this conclusion the coast. The way he came to this conclusion was rather an interesting one. Some time after the date on which the Tahiti is thought to have been lost an unknown vessel was sighted, bottom up, near the coast, and soon after a vessel, supposed to be the same one, and known to be the Tahiti, was seen still nearer the coast. Mr. Leavitt on the supposition that it was the same vessel and moving along at about the some speed decided that she must have been near the Island of Socorra when she was capsized on September 20. It was known that the abandoned nulk was without boats and it is thought that the crew may have made their way to the island, which is a high one and visible at some distance. The island is said to be rich in turtles and wild goats, enough to support life at any rate.

The Chicago Convention Hall.

The latest plan for the wigwam to accommodate the democratic national convention was laid before the committee of arangements in Chicago yesterday afternoon. It contemplates a building on the lake front between Madison and Washington streets 400 by 250 feet in size. It will have a stage for the accommodation of 300 prominent people. In front of that tables are the island, which is a high one and visible at some distance. The island is said to be rich in turtles and wild goats, enough to support life at any rate. port life at any rate.

Mr. Leavitt's brother, who was formerly a consul at one of the Central American ports, was on board the Tahiti when she capsized.

The island is but little out of the Boston's path home to San Francisco, and it was stated at the department today that she would probably be told to stop on the chance of rescuing this band of Robirson Crusoes. During the twenty-four hours ending at noon oday burial permits were issued from the ealth office for the following:

White-Elizabeth Thwaites, 49 years, heart disease; L N. Singleton, 35 years, apoplexy; Elizabeth Costelle, 28 years, pulmonary congestion; Wm. H. Sciders, 20 years, cerebral congestion; Lilian Waggaman, 4 years, diph-

He was up betimes yesterday morning and was on his stand by daylight, where he got the first shot every time. DEMOCRATIC PREFERENCES. How the Delegates to the Chicago Conven tion Will Vote.

The New York Herald this morning presented a timely and highly interesting table showing what are the presidential preferences of the democracy in the various states. The table has been carefully and accurately prepared on the supposition that 900 delegates will be admitted to the Chicago convention under the new apportionment. It is supported by interviews with well posted democrats from each one of the state and territories, on whose judgment the expressed probability as to how the respective delegations will vote are based. The table shows that Mr. Hill leads Mr. Cleveland but very little at the present time, and that the mass of the democracy is looking to the west for a man to lead them to victory. The

An analysis of the table reveals that air. Cleveland seems to be the choice of fifteen states. They are California, Connecticut, Delaware, Maine. Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Ohio, Rhode Isiand, South Dakota, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin. Twelve of these states are reand Wisconsin. Twelve of these states are republican and only three are democratic. Senator Hill is the choice of ten states. They are Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Maryland, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Texas. Seven are democratic and three republican. This shows unmistakably that in the states where the democratic sentiment predominates Hill is stronger than Cleveland. stronger than Cleveland.

But the real choice of the democracy is shown in sixteen states. They want a western man and are: Arkansas, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina. North Dakota, Tennessee and Wyoming. Eight

Their 350 delegates, standing solid for a western man and representing over one-third of the convention against the other two-thirds nopelessly divided, will probably have a great effect in shaping the convention's action.

It will be noticed that three states have been Passed over. They are Alabama, Louisiana and Oregon. Their delegations at present are, it is said, likely to be divided between Hill and

With the sentiment so strong for a western With the sentiment so strong for a western candidate, the possibilities in that direction are worthy of note. It is significant that the west has so far presented four candidates—Gov. Boies of Iows, Senator Palmer of Illinois, ex-Gov. Gray of Indiana and ex-Postmaster General Don Dickinson of Michigan. The strongest of these are Boies and Palmer and of the two Boies seems to have the lead. This is chiefly due to his free silver affiliations. Palmer, on the other hand, has openly declared against the free coinage of silver and the effect of this will be to greatly neutralize his chances. A favorite ticket in the west would seem to

You have the documents, surely, else you could not quote from them. I will give you a sufficient time in which to conform to my reasonable demand, say ten days. If at the end of that time you fail to respond. I shail deem it my duty to give in substance their contents and corroborate my statement by publishing letters from your son, both prior and subsequent to our marriage.

said yesterday:

It seems that Mr. Blaine believes that I was too severe, and I regret it very much, as I certainly did not wish or intend to be unduly harsh or severe in the remarks made from the bench, though I thought at the time, and still think, they were conched in the most moderate and conservative language and upon the clear and undisputed testimony in the case, which, in my judgment, would have warranted much stronger language than I used.

He was an influential democratic editor before the war, and was appointed provisional governor of the state by President Johnson in 1865, and was elected governor during reconstruction in 1868. In 1870 he declared several counties to be in a state of insurrection, and raised a military force to suppress alleged outraces. He was impeached in 1871 and deposed, the sentence of the court imposing political disabilities. He was afterward postmaster at Raleigh. His health had long been failing. He made several efforts unsuccessfully to have his disabilities removed, but the legislature steadily refused his appeals. For a while after the war he was associated with Gen. Forney in newspaper work in Washington.

MARIE NEVINS' LETTERS,

Secretary Blaine Given Ten Days to Print Them in Full.

Mrs. Marie Nevins Blaine has furnished to the press an open letter to Secretary Blaine in which she denies the charge that she led his son unresisting to the altar. After saying that she was well aware that she was unable to cope with the Secretary in a personal encounter she, however, expected the considerate and honorable treatment which his keen sense of fairness would dictate. She then says:
